How to Read an Article Citation in a Database

Below are 2 examples citations of journal articles from Academic Search Complete, an EBSCOhost database.

This type of information is what you will use in citing articles for your papers:
- Title – Title of the article, typically the first item you read
- Author(s) – Author(s) of the article
- Source – Title, or name, of the journal, newspaper, or magazine the article is in, followed by Article publication month and year, then publication’s volume and sometimes issue number, and the page numbers
- DOI number – This is sometimes needed as well
- Sometimes also the database name (e.g., Academic Search Complete) and/or publisher (e.g., EBSCOhost)

Servant leadership and conflict resolution: a qualitative study.

Authors: Jit, Ravinder1,2,3, Sharma, Chandra Shekhar1,2,3, Kawaiya, Mona1,2,3

Author Affiliations: 1Department of Management, Maharaja Agrasen Institute of Technology, Delhi, India
2Department of Commerce, Shri Ram College of Commerce, Delhi, India
3Department of Management, Maharaja Agrasen Institute of Management Studies, Delhi, India

Full Text Word Count: 10506

ISSN: 1044-4066

DOI: 10.1108/IJCMA-12-2015-0086

Accession Number: 110550223
Tips:

In most databases, the SAME INFORMATION is typically provided in the SAME ORDER as above.

Be sure to consult your citation style manual for MLA or APA or any other style needed to find out exactly what you need and what style you need to format your citation.

Citing Sources and Avoiding Plagiarism:

For more information on citing sources in MLA or APA style and avoiding plagiarism, visit the Library’s web page @ www.ohiodominican.edu/library/help & click on “Citing Sources and Avoiding Plagiarism”

Or go directly to ODU Library’s Quick Reference: APA, MLA, & Other Styles.